Mostly went according to plan, but spent more time also on Animated GIFs as some students missed the last class. It's difficult to start a class at 8:30 am as many students come late and I have to start the demo late to avoid doing it twice. Not much option otherwise they just won't learn it from a video demo or notes. There needs to be hands-on assistance with tricky technology - especially software stuff. Some students in Visual Arts are technologically challenged and often need to go over the same thing two or three times to remember it.

Projects are going really well and I don't anticipate anyone failing this class. Just a few stragglers with the mixed reality review, but they will be completed by the end of semester for sure. This unit is a really successful one for getting vis art students to go a little deeper with digital tech. They have particularly enjoyed the kaleidoscope project and creating a blog in Wordpress. Even the 3D VAS Virtual Gallery is being setup enthusiastically. I don't think I will change the plan at all for this unit – unless some easier to use software becomes available.
